

Joint CIArb & LCIA Annual Seminar: Your Arbitration has Been Hacked, What Now?

The CIArb London Branch invites you to join us for our next seminar organised in conjunction with the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA) which is kindly hosted by Quadrant Chambers.

Our experts will discuss what to do when the arbitration process has been hacked alongside debating how to handle illegally obtained evidence.

The hybrid seminar will include a Q&A session, and will be followed by a drinks' reception.

Moderator: Karina Albers FCIArb, International Commercial Arbitrator, Chair of the CIArb London Branch

Speakers:

Jamie Harrison FCIArb, Deputy Director General of the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA) joined the LCIA after nearly 8 years in Singapore, where he set up and managed the Singapore office of Addleshaw Goddard LLP. He is a qualified solicitor in England & Wales and Hong Kong, and has been a registered foreign lawyer with full registration before the International Commercial Court, in Singapore.

Ruth Hosking is a barrister at Quadrant Chambers specialising in international arbitration, shipping, commodities and commercial litigation. Ruth sits as an arbitrator (both as part of a panel and as sole) including under the LCIA Rules. She has been shortlisted as junior of the year at this year's Legal 500 Bar Awards.

Robert Maddox is a member of Debevoise & Plimpton LLP's Data Strategy & Security practice in London. His work focuses on cybersecurity incident preparation and response, data protection and strategy, internal investigations, compliance reviews, and regulatory defense. In 2021, Robert was named to Global Data Review's "40 Under 40". He is also described as "a rising star" in cyber law by The Legal 500 US (2022).

Shobana Iyer (FCIArb), Swan Chambers, is practising barrister and arbitrator. She has experience in a variety of industry sectors including renewable energy, financial, retail, sports, creative and the TMT sectors.
